Global purpose-driven family company improves transparency, cost control and employee experience with Navan

Since implementing Navan in 2023, Viessmann Generations Group has increased transparency, reduced manual effort and improved the employee experience across travel and expense.

Before partnering with Navan, Viessmann Generations Group managed travel and expense processes across several tools and workflows. Employees faced long support wait times, while the finance team handled manual expense processing at the end of each month.

"With Navan, we've digitized the entire travel and expense management process and consolidated it into an intuitive platform," said Alexander Pöllmann, CIO, Viessmann. "The best proof of its success: We receive virtually no internal support requests for it because the tool is so reliable."

To further simplify the employee experience and support finance teams with greater automation and transparency, the company sought a more integrated and scalable solution.

Viessmann Generations Group employees manage bookings and expenses through Navan's user-friendly mobile experience, reducing friction and support effort throughout the travel booking and management process.

"To build a global purpose-driven organization like the Viessmann Generations Group, employees need the freedom to travel and connect with partners effortlessly," said Zahir Abdelouhab, SVP, Enterprise Sales, Navan. "Our partnership is taking the hassle out of travel and expenses, so their team can get out there, meet people face-to-face, and focus on the connections that matter."
