"At Enbridge, disciplined cost management and operational excellence are key to our success," said Tracie Slone, VP & Chief Supply Chain Officer at Enbridge. "Navan helps us simplify travel, reduce manual work, and deliver a better user experience – supporting both efficiency and disciplined growth across our operations."

The partnership is driven by four key pillars:

- AI-Powered, Always-On Support: Navan combines industry-leading AI with human expertise, designed to provide reliable support 24/7. Whether through self-service, AI-powered chat, or access to designated consultants via chat or call, this will help Enbridge travelers receive a premium experience that matches their individual preferences.
- Self-Service & Mobile-First Experience: By enabling employees with intuitive, mobile-first tools, Navan is making day-to-day work simpler and more efficient for Enbridge. This digital-first mindset helps streamline the booking process.
- Expansive Inventory & NDC Capabilities: Navan provides Enbridge with direct access to comprehensive global travel content, including NDC capabilities. This ensures travelers will see more options and better prices, driving program compliance and helping to maximize the value of every dollar spent.
- Meaningful Cost Savings: The transition to Navan is projected to unlock an estimated CAD $2 million in projected savings annually, by optimizing hotel spend, and shifting air bookings online.

"Success is built on the ability to execute consistently at every level," said Michael Sindicich, President of Navan. "To help fuel Enbridge's mission for the next 75 years, we are delivering the tighter spend controls and predictable growth they require. By providing modern tools and broader inventory that free up employee time, we give leadership the visibility and control needed to ensure the entire organization remains laser-focused on the future of energy."

Enbridge joins a growing list of enterprise organizations switching to Navan, including industry leaders from across Canada such as PCL Construction. This momentum is underscored by Navan's recent ranking as the No. 1 Travel Management Software in Canada in the G2 Spring 2026 Rankings.
