"At Cummins, we are constantly balancing our rich history of manufacturing excellence with a deep commitment to what's next," said Bonnie Fetch, EVP of Operations at Cummins. "That means putting tools in the hands of our employees that make their days more efficient, while ensuring they have the service and support they need to get where they need to go safely. I know from my time in the travel industry that the move from offline to online booking was one of its greatest transformations. Corporate travel is going through its next major shift in how content is delivered, support is provided, and user experiences are designed, and we believe Navan has the technology, people, and vision to help Cummins stay ahead of that change."

The partnership is driven by four key pillars:

- AI-Powered, Always-On Support: Navan combines industry-leading AI with human expertise to provide reliable support 24/7. This will help ensure Cummins' global travelers receive a premium experience no matter where they are, with the confidence that help is available when they need it most.
- Self-Service & Mobile-First Experience: By enabling employees with intuitive, mobile-first tools, Cummins is reducing friction in daily work for its field staff and global travelers. This digital-first mindset streamlines the booking process, gives employees time back, and helps them stay focused on their day-to-day responsibilities.
- Expansive Global Inventory: Navan provides Cummins with direct access to comprehensive global travel content, including critical regional inventory in key markets like India. This will help ensure travelers see better options and prices, helping drive program adoption and compliance across Cummins' global footprint.
- Operational Cost Management: By using automation to save time and provide clearer visibility into travel activity and costs, Cummins can manage its program more effectively and redirect resources toward the strategic priorities that will power its next 100 years.

"Cummins is an iconic company that powers the world, and we are honored to provide the technology that moves its people," said Michael Sindich, President of Navan. "From our earliest conversations, it was clear that Cummins was looking for more than a travel platform. They were looking for a partner that could help them care for employees, modernize operations, and support a global workforce with the right combination of technology and people. Navan was built for this next era of business travel, and we are proud to help Cummins bring more markets online while giving its teams the confidence that they will be supported by our agents wherever work takes them."

Cummins joins a growing list of enterprise organizations switching to Navan, including industry leaders like Simplot and PCL Construction.
